vided in the past. Under the division of duties, the matter was referred to John Hirschberg, who took up with Mr. Warwick the matter of furnishing the protection desired.

In the opinion of Mr. Hirschberg, the mere stationing of an ambulance in the inclosure does not afford ample protection. The crowds are so dense as to make the movement of the large car difficult, and attended with danger car difficult, and attended with danger of injury to pedestrians. In case of serious injury, the distance from the City Home, where the patient would have to be taken, prevents prompt treatment

The position of the ambulance on the grounds, it appears, is not generally known. The most serious accident last year happened within 600 feet of the ambulance. A man fell off a merry-go-round, landed on a broken bottle and bled to death in an automobile in which he was being rushed to the city. SPECIAL SESSION TO PASS ON TAX REFORM

Bar Association.

Démocratic nominees for the House of Delegates who have been in Richmond in the past week or ten days lean largely to the view outlined by former Speaker Richard Evelyn Byrd that there should be a special session for the consideration of tax reform. If tentative plans now taking shape are fully matured, a Democratic caucus of the two houses of the General Assembly will determine in advance of the coming regular session to defer all matters relating to tax reform to a special session to be held in November, 1914, to appoint a joint committee from the Senate and House to sit in the Interim and prepare bills for consideration of the members, and to ask Henry C. Stuart, who will then be Giovernor of Virginia to ask sit in the interim and personal sit in the interim and persona

A number of appointments, both of the present Governor and of the in-coming Governor, are to be confirmed. Reform of the fee system is regarded by many as of scarcely less importance than tax reform. The battle on the enabling act is to be fought over again. A new speaker is to be elected, and there will inevitably be delay in organization.

Under the Constitution, a special session may last only thirty days. If called to consider tax reform alone, with definite bills already prepared for consideration, the time of members would not be diverted by those seeking other legislation.

Nothing definite will be determined until after the November election, as some of the strong Democratic leaders in the House have Republican opposition in their home counties. But before the session meets in January it is believed there will be a definite agreement reached in regard to this and other legislation, with a view of avoiding endless time-consuming delabates on the floor after the regular bates on the floor after the regular
